Family Care Conferences in Long-Term Care: Exploring Content and Processes in End of Life Communication

KEY POINTS

- End of life (EOL) communication in long-term care homes (LTC) is often inadequate and delayed, leaving residents dying with unknown preferences or goals of care
- Poor communication with staff contributes to families feeling unprepared, distressed and unsatisfied with care
- Family Care Conferences (FCC) aim to increase structured, systematic communication around goals and plans for EOL

RESEARCH TOPIC

- The purpose of this sub-study is to examine FCC: a) content, and b) guiding processes such as documentation and multidisciplinary staff participation using mixed methods
- As part of the 'Strengthening a Palliative Approach to Care' (SPA-LTC) project, FCCs were implemented in 4 LTC sites in Ontario, Canada.
- Twenty-four FCCs were held for residents with a Palliative Performance Scale of 40% (nearing death). Data was collected from conference forms (i.e. Family Questionnaires, Care Plan Conference Summaries), site-specific electronic chart documents and field notes
- Directed-content analysis of the data was informed by the Canadian Hospice Palliative Care Association's 'Square of Care' model which describes eight domains of care: Disease Management, Physical, Psychological, Social, Practical, Spiritual, EOL and Loss/Bereavement

KEY FINDINGS

- FCCs addressed an average of 71% of content domains with physical and EOL care addressed most frequently, and loss/bereavement addressed the least
- Examination of processes supporting EOL communication found: i) advantages to using FCC forms vs. electronic charts, and ii) high level of multidisciplinary participation overall but limited participation of Personal Support Workers (PSWs) and physicians
- Communication around EOL in LTC can be improved through the use of FCCs
  - Description of content and FCC processes provides guidance to persons implementing FCCs
  - Recommendations for tailoring conferences to optimize communication include use of specific conference forms, increased bereavement discussion, further engagement of PSWs and Physicians
